Museum Director: FAS Dean Bob Dyson

Until midsummer he will still wear two hats, but they are already being tilted at different angles.

The selection of FAS Dean Robert H. Dyson, Jr., as director of the University Museum sets up a spring semester of transition in which Associate Dean Donald D. Fitts will take a stronger role in budget preparation and other FAS activities. A search for a new dean will be launched promptly, President Sheldon Hackney said, and if a new one is not chosen by June 30, Dr. Fitts will become acting dean.

Meanwhile, Dr. Dyson's nomination as Museum director goes before the Trustees Executive Board on March 18 and he is already—as a serving director since fall—traveling for what Trustee Robert M. Trescher calls the "formidable" task of fund-raising for the 95-year-old Museum. "Bob Dyson is a brilliant and natural choice," said Mr. Trescher, who is chair of the Museum's Board of Overseers as well as vice-chairman of the Trustees.

"At the end of the decade, the University will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Museum, and there is no one more capable of leading this great cultural institution into its second century. The task before him is formidable; an international search for funds is required to assure a future for one of the world's richest treasuries of the past."

"Bob brings to his new position not only a distinguished record of scholarly accomplishment and demonstrated administrative ability but such genuine enthusiasm for the work before him that I am filled with hope. It is the expedition and exhibition functions of the Museum which make it so singular an educational resource, and under his leadership I am confident they will be performed creatively and superbly well."

At 54, Bob Dyson has spent most of his professional life with the Museum, home base for all but a few of his 300 expeditions to 33 sites on five continents. Four years after he took his A.B. magna cum laude from Harvard in 1950, he joined Pennsylvania as an assistant in the Museum's Near East Section with an associate's appointment in anthropology at the College. He rose on the parallel ladders of teaching and fieldwork to become, by 1962, associate professor of anthropology and associate curator of the section. That same year he was named Chevalier des Arts et Lettres by the French government—one of many international recognitions that followed his 1958 discovery of the Golden Bowl of Hasanlu in western Iran, and his anthropologist's insights into the Iron Age culture.

In 1967, after taking his Ph.D. at Harvard in 1966, Dr. Dyson was promoted to full professor and curator. He continued to direct the Hasanlu project until recent upheaval halted the work; a 1977 festschrift by 20 of its former members, Mountains and Lowlands, sums up the 21-year project.

As co-chairman of the University Development Commission in 1972-73, Dr. Dyson with Dr. Eliot Stellar developed the "One University" theme that is considered to have given the modern University of Pennsylvania its clear self-image and to have paved the way for raising almost $270 million between 1975 and 1980.

He became associate dean of FAS in 1976, and moved up to dean—at first on an acting basis—in 1979 when Dr. Vartan Gregorian became provost. The Thomas S. Gates Professorship was added to his title in 1981.

Dr. Dyson has continued to chair the editorial board of the Museum's quarterly, Expedition, and to publish and lecture extensively in

Senate: Withdrawal of Dr. Baltzell

Dr. E. Digby Baltzell, nominated by petition for chair-elect of the Faculty Senate on February 22, has withdrawn his name for health reasons, and the nominating committee's slate in which Dr. June Axinn holds that post (page 2) has been declared elected.

"I am of course very disappointed to have to forego the chance to run for election," Dr. Baltzell said in a February 23 letter to Senate Chair Phoebe Leboy, "more than for myself, for those friends who obtained the signatures of some 100 of my colleagues to petition for my candidacy. I am grateful for their faith and help—both those who obtained the petition and those who signed it." His letter to Dr. Leboy is being mailed to all 109 signers via the Senate Office.

Dr. Baltzell, a widely published professor of sociology, agreed to stand for election soon after the nominating committee's slate was published February 9. However, during a lecture tour of New England he had a recurrence of angina that led to his decision "not to add the three-year obligation of the Senate chairmanship to my very full schedule of teaching and writing."

"If Dr. Baltzell's name had come to us early on, the committee would have been delighted to have it in consideration," said Dr. Kenneth Fegley, who chaired the nominating committee. "I am certainly not opposed to contested elections, but the committee's charge is to bring in a single slate. Fortunately we did receive nominations for some very able and widely respected candidates. From among these we chose Dr. June Axinn. The committee was gratified that Dr. Axinn agreed to serve."

Dr. Axinn, an economist who graduated from Queens College and took her Ph.D. at Penn, is a professor at the School of Social Work, where she held the rotating Kenneth L.M. Pray Professorship. She publishes primarily on social economics, and her 1975 History of Social Welfare (with Herman Levin of the faculty) was reissued this month by Harper and Row. Since 1970 she has served on numerous Senate and Council committees, including Senate's Economic Status and Academic Freedom and Responsibility committees; the University-wide Benefits Committee; and Council Steering Committee.

the U.S. and Europe. He has also served recently as president and later honorary president of the Archaeological Institute of America; president and now trustee of the American Institute of Iranian Studies which he helped found in 1966; and member of the Harvard Board of Overseers' visiting committee to the Peabody Museum. A Fellow of the AAAS and Junior Fellow of Harvard, he has also held Guggenheim, ACLS and other fellowships and awards here and abroad.
