Etrusco-Corinthian Olpe (jug), terra cotta, 6th century B.C., Vulci, Italy. Rendered in imitation of the painting style of the Greek city of Corinth, with frieze of Etruscan warriors wearing helmets and carrying round shields.

Opening March 16, the multi-million dollar reinstallation of the permanent classical galleries at the University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, presents the Museum's unique classical collections in a modern, thematic context and shows how these cultures continue to influence and inspire our world today. The Etruscan World gallery will be the only comprehensive exhibit of Etruscan objects currently on display in the United States.

More than 1,000 ancient artifacts are on display—including marble and bronze sculptures, jewelry, metalwork, mosaics, glass vessels, gold and silver coins, and pottery of exceptional artistic and historical renown—drawn from the Museum's outstanding Mediterranean collection of more than 30,000 objects, dating from 3,000 B.C. to the 5th century A.D. Of special importance are artifact groups from the Etruscan tomb groups excavated at Narce and Vulci, Roman statuary from the Sanctuary of Diana Nemorensis on the shores of Lake Nemi, south of Rome, and sculpture and architectural decoration from the Museum's own excavations at Minturnae, north of Naples.

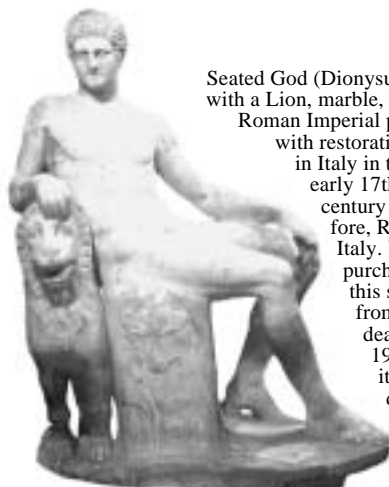

Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Closed Mondays and holidays. Admission donation is $5 for adults; $2.50 for senior citizens and students with ID; free to Members, PENNcard holders, and children 6 and under. From now through May 18, 2003 the Museum is free to the public on Sundays.

Antefix with Satyr head, terra cotta, 4th century B.C., Cerveteri, Italy. One of a set of antefixes with backdrops in the shape of shells, from a large temple in the countryside of Caere. They were used along the edge of roofs. The satyrs have red flesh that shows they are males.

ROMANS

Locus Cover (burial niche) funerary relief of man and servants, limestone, 2nd century A.D., Palmyra, Syria. The sculpted covers that seal the loculi in Palmyra's Valley of the Dead, provides considerable information about Palmyrene burial customs, religion and local life. This cover depicts a youth reclining with a vase in his left hand. Two males in smaller scale, perhaps slaves, stand by, holding amphora and a cup.

Seated God (Dionysus) with a Lion, marble, Roman Imperial period with restorations in Italy in the early 17th century or before, Rome, Italy. UPM purchased this statue from a dealer in 1911 and it can be dated back to 1622.

Two lamps, terra cotta, 1st-2nd century A.D., Rome, Italy. One lamp has the image of a running warrior on the top surface; the other depicts a racing chariot on its top. Oil-burning lamps were the primary source of artificial light in a Roman house.
