

Assignment 1. Reflection on Your Own Learning
Foundations of Teaching and Learning – EDUC 616
Fall 2021

This assignment version is for Professor Baker's section

Post due 9/13 1159pm USA Eastern

We will begin our exploration of learning by examining some of our own experiences. We will also use this assignment for you to introduce yourself to your instructor and your discussion group. You will write a vignette about a situation where you learned something. Describe the context (scene and events) of this learning experience in as much detail as possible, explain what you learned, and how the experience made you feel. Then, explore what this experience suggests to you about:

- What learning is
- How learning occurs
- Factors that support and inhibit learning

You are not expected to use theory or content from readings for this assignment. We are interested in how you interpret your experience.

Your vignette should be no more than 1,200 words. Submit your vignette on Piazza to your Discussion Group's Forum.

Please read your group members' reflections before coming to class on September 17 and come to class prepared to discuss themes or interesting differences.
